ARCADIS Geraghty & Miller International Ltd (AGMI) EXPANDS CONSULTANCY SERVICES

Newmarket: UK- 14 November 2007

ARCADIS Geraghty & Miller International Ltd (AGMI), the international environmental service provider, has announced today the acquisition of Vectra Group Limited (Vectra).

Vectra provides services in risk-management for health and safety and other environmental consultancy services to clients in highly regulated industrial sectors, specifically in the oil, gas, nuclear and transportation sectors. Vectra has offices throughout the UK and has established operations in the Netherlands and in the Middle East.

Dr Brian Crook, Managing Director of AGMI comments “The acquisition of Vectra is a major addition to ARCADIS in the UK and worldwide. It is consistent with our strategy of providing a breadth of related services to our blue chip clients. Vectra offers the opportunity to provide complimentary services to a well established and mutual client base. As clients strive to rationalise their supply chains AGMI is now even better positioned to provide those highly technical services that are key to many major industries We expect to roll out the opportunity to take advantage of these services to all our multi-national clients over the forthcoming months.”

Technical innovation in a secure development scenario is an operating environment for which all major companies aspire. The acquisition of Vectra enables AGMI to provide this service, based upon a wealth of project experience, from an office local to a client anywhere in the UK.

ARCADIS GMI Ltd, within ARCADIS NV, is part of an international group providing services in the environment, infra-structure and facilities. There are over 600 fee earners within ARCADIS based in the UK, providing a range of services than can take projects from initial concept through investigation and detailed design to implementation.
